Overview of the Cinnabar Foundation
Founded in 1983 by four longtime conservation activists, the Cinnabar Foundation is a private independent foundation born out of a conundrum — how best to support long-term the constitutional right of Montanans to a clean and healthful environment. The seeding of the Foundation came from Len and Sandy Sargent, who later donated the bulk of their estate to the Foundation. The intent was, and continues to be, to invite others to join in growing this permanent fund by consolidating and strategically directing resources in perpetuity.

To continue providing grants for generations to come, the Foundation seeks and obtains charitable gifts, invests those contributions prudently, and then disburses available funds for charitable purposes through a competitive grants process consistent with the Foundation’s purposes. The Cinnabar Foundation is Montana’s only homegrown, statewide conservation fund.

Our Board of Directors meets at least twice a year with virtual meetings as necessary. With passion and commitment, the Board and Staff work collaboratively to help protect and conserve water, wildlife and wild lands in Montana and the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem (GYE) by supporting organizations and people who share our vision. We do this by investing in organizations and projects where opportunities for impact and success are supported by sound science, strategic planning, effective organization, strong leadership, and community-based constituencies. We also collaborate with other private conservation funders through the mutual sharing of information to leverage support for conservation efforts in Montana and the GYE.

Position Description

As a Board-led organization, the Cinnabar Foundation seeks an experienced, collaborative and personable Executive Director (ED) who is willing and able to participate in and guide all aspects of the Foundation’s work including fund development; implementation of the Foundation’s Strategic Framework; grants management; and financial and administrative oversight. The successful candidate will have extensive experience and current relationships with a variety of funders such as private individuals and other foundations working in Montana on conservation issues.

Realizing that the Foundation’s growth is dependent upon a widespread understanding of its mission, the ED must be able to identify and utilize the existing strengths of the Board and others. The Executive Director must be an exceptional listener; open-minded; highly organized; lead by example; know how to build and sustain enduring relationships; and work effectively and efficiently with a broad range of people who represent our constituency, including grantees, donors and donor prospects, financial advisors, government agencies, media, and the general public.

The raising of funds, managing financial accounts, as well as the administration of grants, require the ED to maintain precise records and reporting systems. This position requires a person with demonstrated experience in managing a nonprofit organization, fundraising, grants management and assessment, budgeting, investments, public relations, marketing and program development. Additional requirements include: demonstrated leadership and fundraising ability; proven communication and marketing skills; and an ability to work under pressure and meet deadlines. Further, this position requires a person who can work a flexible schedule, including occasional work in the evenings and on weekends.

Work Location

The ED will work at his/her home in Montana and attend the Foundation’s biannual Board meetings, which will be held at various state locations.

Since Cinnabar Foundation Board members and conservation partners are scattered throughout Montana and the GYE, the ED must be familiar with and willing to use technology such as Dropbox, email and Zoom.
